Aronson Security Group names new AEC and Education Account Executive - Eric Scott, industry veteran, assumes role

Seattle — August 20, 2009 — Aronson Security Group (ASG) announced today that Eric Scott has been named the Account Executive for the Education and Architects, Engineers, and Contractors (AEC) for the State of Washington. In this role he will be responsible for communicating with and advising organization within these industries in order to provide solutions that are critical to their operations as well as assist them in ensuring that security aligns with the mission, goals, and values of their organization.

“Eric’s ability to understand the unique needs of the AEC and Education community and work with the ASG engineering and project management disciplines created an opportunity for a highly advantageous career move that we believe will benefit ASG, our industry, and our clients,” said Mike Kobelin, Vice President of Sales and Marketing for ASG.

“My background in these markets and my knowledge of how they function and what their unique needs are allow me to offer the kind of advice that is truly valuable to clients in these industries,” commented Scott. “I look forward to working with these verticals so that security can function as an organization’s business tool as well as risk management tool.”
